DESIGN

ORGANICALLY GROWN

Inspired by the gracefully curving lines of an exotic hothouse flower, Kenneth Cobonpue's prototype Bloom Lounge Chair—handmade of microfiber sculpted by hundreds of fine running stitches over a resin top with a stainless-steel base—made its debut in September 2009 at Maison et Objet in Paris and is now available stateside. ARCHITECTURE

HIGH NOTE

Designed by award-winning architect Richard Varda, of RSP Architects, Phoenix's 190,000-square-foot Musical Instrument Museum is the first of its kind, displaying over 5,000 music-making specimens from all over the world. The branchchild of former Target CEO Bob Ulrich is scheduled to open in late April. themim.org; 480.481.2460

SUITE DREAMS

The Four Seasons Hotel and Private Residences will reach completion this summer, offering a distinct blend of downtown and luxury living thanks to the design nuances implemented by Janice Clausen, of Atlanta-based Clausen-Chewning Interior Design and master architect John Carney, of Jackson, Wyoming. While the residences are contemporary in nature, discrete touches of rustic Rocky Mountain West, like embossed cow-hide-back leather couches and regionally quarried limestone, enliven the homes. Large, spacious terraces that provide the extravagance of outdoor living cater to Carney's desire that Denver's ideal climate be enjoyed and celebrated.
